Cyclonic Fury of Wind To Reach Florida Coast Today

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 25.—(AP)—The steamer Domira, believed to be a freighter, is grounded off Abaco island, in the Bahamas, with little chance to rescue the crew unless a breeches buoy can be rigged to land, a dispatch to the Tropical Radio Company said this morning.

The Domira, according to the radio report, was aground 100 feet off shore in a raging sea, with a hurricane blowing and asked that a tug with breeches buoy attached be sent.

Storm Warning Given

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 25.—(AP)—An advisory weather report issued by Father Gutierrez Lanzo, meteorologist of Belen college, today warned Florida east coast cities, especially in the area between Palm Beach and Miami, to take precautions against cyclonic disturbances which would probably reach that sector by tonight or early tomorrow. He further advised the suspension of all maritime activities in Florida waters.

Father Lanzo told the Associated Press that the Bahaman disturbances would reach truly cyclonic proportions as it neared the Florida east coast, equalling in intensity the storm of last year which left many coast towns in ruins.

Later he made another sale by allowing "turn-in" value on a row-boat and pet bear.

Release Officers On Assault Charge

Court Says Not Enough Evidence To Hold Levy Police

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—The charge of assault with a deadly weapon against Joe Wilson, acting chief of police of Levy, a North Little Rock suburb, and his assistant, Lloyd Nix, growing out of firing on an automobile last Saturday night, was dismissed by municipal judge Harn today.

The court ruled the evidence was insufficient to hold the men for grand jury action. The officers testified that they fired at a car driven by A. V. Ahrentzen, a North Little Rock business man, and punctured a tire but denied firing at occupants of the car.

They said they fired at Ahrentzen's car after he had disregarded a command to halt when they intended arresting him for speeding.

Sunday School Union Issues Censored Bible

LONDON, Sept. 25.—An expurgated copy of the Bible was issued yesterday by the National Sunday School Union.

Among the changes of phrase, the invitation to Joseph by Potiphar's wife is translated "his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph and tempted him to do evil," and in the story of the prodigal son "evil companions" is substituted for "harlots."

St. John's account of Christ's treatment of the woman taken in adultery is omitted.

He Called Nation's Capital "Wet"

If Senator Robert B. Powell of Nebraska, above, is going to call Washington a "wet" city, he'll have to present "definite facts" to President Hoover and prohibition authorities. This unexpected White House pronouncement followed Powell's speech in the Senate declaring the President could make the capital dry if he insisted on it.

Calendar Discussin Betrays Superstition

Discussion of the proposed new calendar demonstrates that superstition, which the county flatters itself it has outgrown, still exists.

The principal objection to its establishment is the recurrence of the number thirteen in the plan.

"All sorts of practical objections of course can be raised again altering a calendar that has been doing service for two thousand years, and the religious objections deserve our respectful attention. But this nonsense about the evil influence of having thirteen Fridays the thirteenth is distressing to everybody who thought we were outgrowing superstition."

"Mr. Fulsom, of the Eastman Kodak Company, which is already working on a thirteen month basis, points out for the benefit of the superstitious that America was discovered on a Friday; the Pilgrims landed on a Friday; there were thirteen stripes in the American flag and thirteen feathers in the tail of the American Eagle."

Misouri County's Pupils Get Their Vacation Now

CHARLESTON, Mo., Sept. 25.—While schools are just starting in most places, it is nearly vacation time in Mississippi county, all due to mud.

Mud has changed entirely an educational system. Because of impassable roads in the winter time, schools in the county begin the first of April, and vacation time comes in mid-winter.

Faced with the problem of having a regular school year, educational leaders decided upon the summer and fall months.

Minister Slugged While In Pulpit

Church Quarrel Said Cause of Recent Trouble

Masked Man Steps Behind Preacher and Uses Blackjack

KNOCKED SENSELESS

Split In Church Over Politics Is Given As Cause of Affray

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Rev. C. C. Walters, 56, a Baptist minister, is in a hospital here today suffering from injuries to his head and two men are in the county jail in connection with an assault on the preacher during services conducted in an arbor used by the new Mount Holly Baptist church 16 miles south of here last night. Those held in jail are William Polster, 40, and George Knabe, 40, both farmers.

Witnesses reported to officers that Walters had begun his sermon when a masked man stepped in behind him in the pulpit and struck him with a club. As Walters fell to the floor unconscious his assailant escaped.

Simultaneously with the blow, a shot was fired on the outside of the arbor. The congregation, frightened by the clubbing and the shooting, fled. Polster, driver of a consolidated school bus, and Knabe, were arrested today because they had had been outspoken enemies of the minister.

The trouble, it is said, grew out of the withdrawal of a portion of a former congregation to form the new Mount Olive Baptist church. Walters, now living at Bald Knob was to become pastor of the new church.

Kin of Revolutionary Hero To Visit Fair

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Francis Pulaski, descendant of the revolutionary war hero after whom Pulaski county is named, will be a guest of the Arkansas State Fair here on Pulaski day, early in October.

The modern idea of exercise is to take a good stiff motor ride of ten miles before starting for work.

"Red" Russin complains that White Russians are guilty of atrocities on the Manchurian border. They certainly do draw the color line sharply in that country."

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Two men were shot and killed and four others injured in a pistol battle between a squad of detectives and a group of negroes, believed to be a kidnaping gang, besieged in a South Side flat today.

Detective Wm. Gallagher, squad leader, was killed and two of the squad wounded as they battered their way into the apartment, reported to be headquarters for a negro kidnaping gang.

One of the men killed was a negro, and one of the seriously wounded was also a member of the gang for whom police have searched for the past several days. Four men and the women were arrested.

Iron Age Fort Is Believed Found

Remains of Ancient Fort Uncovered In British Explorations

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Along side of the road over which it is believed William the Conqueror led his soldiers on their triumphant march to London, archaeologists have uncovered the remains of prehistoric earth works at least 2,500 years old.

These excavations are just off Pembury road, Tonbridge, and according to popular tradition were the ruins of a fortified camp built by William the Conqueror.

Study by S. E. Wimbolt, the well known English archaeologist, has established that these earthworks are not of such recent building but rather belong to the Iron Age.

The site is at an altitude of 420 feet and commands a view of the counties of Kent, Surrey and Sussex. The diggers have uncovered a part of an ancient floor and quantities of charcoal.

The outer walls of the site encircle 14 acres. Search is now being made for specimens of pottery which will definitely establish the identity of that ancient people which lived and fought in Kent before the time of Christ.

Explains How To Appeal Tax Levy

Commission Says Petition Must Be Filed By Second Monday In October.

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 25.—The Arkansas Tax Commission yesterday sent a circular letter to all county judges, containing a ruling by the commission on the jurisdiction of county courts in the adjustment of assessments of property as fixed by the county assessor or as equalized by the County Equalization Board.

The commission said any property owner who has exhausted his remedy before the Equalization Board or who has had no opportunity to appear before the board, may appeal from the action of the board on or before the second Monday in October by filing petition of appeal with the county clerk. All such appeals must be heard and final order made on or before the first Monday in November.

After discussing provisions of the statute relating to appeals, the commission said:

"We, therefore, conclude that an appeal to the county court will lie and it is within the jurisdiction of said court to act when one or more of the following conditions exist, provided, such petition of appeal has been filed with the clerk on or before the second Monday in October.

"(1). Where the property owner filed in writing with the board on or before the third Monday in August an application for the adjustment of his assessment as fixed by the assessor and was not granted the relief desired.

"(2). Where the property owner whose assessment was increased by the board on its own motion and said property owner, on or before the first Saturday next preceding the third Monday in September, applied to said board for a re-adjustment and was not granted the relief desired.

"(a) Where the property owner filed a list of his property with the assessor as by law required but no notice of increase was received by said property owner.

"(b). Where the board increased the assessment as fixed by the assessor but the property owner was not notified, or if notice was received, receipt of such was at so late a date as to not afford opportunity to appear before said board."

Maybe Recognition Isn't Needed

THE subject of Russian recognition is not mentioned in this country quite as often as it was a few years ago. And recent news advices make one wonder if the question is not, after all, a relatively unimportant one.

There is a great deal to be said, pro and con, about the broad question of Russian propaganda, debt repudiation, etc. Meanwhile, two salient facts are emerging. One is that Russia is desperately in need of precisely the kind of goods that America has for sale; the other is that both Russians and Americans, realizing this, are beginning to do business on a big scale.

The other day a big American steamship company signed an agreement with the Russian government to establish a regular steamship service between New York and Russia Black Sea ports, with sailings at each end of the line twice a month.

At the same time, the Russian government announced the purchase from a Cleveland concern of more than 700 tractors. This, coming on the heels of the announcement that Ford is to establish a large factory in Russia, is interesting; the more so in view of the fact that the Russians have also contracted with an Akron rubber company to construct a new tire factory at the city of Yaroslavl.

Nor is that all. The Russians have signed "technical assistance" contracts with 25 big American firms. American experts will help the soviet executives establish factories, will initiate them into the mysteries of mass production, will show them how to transplant American prosperity to communistic soil.

The net effect of all of this is bound to be great. It goes without saying that a Communism to which has been grafted modern American industrialism will not be the sort of Communism that Russia introduced us to just after the war. Something new is in the process of being born in Russia—and America is helping.

All of which, we repeat, makes the question of political recognition seem relatively unimportant. The two nations are working together for their mutual benefit; does it matter greatly whether their governments officially "recognize" one another?

Cotton's Rise in Fashion

TWO years ago, cotton fabrics began to be noticeable in the marts of fashion as a "coming" element with which to contend. The upstart received little encouragement, for who would ever wear cotton? Surely no woman in America ever would, save in the plainest of house dresses.

A recent report from Walker D. Hines, president of the Cotton-Textile Institute, is all the more interesting in view of the fact that so many leaders in style—and such a large majority of other people—declared that cottons would never achieve importance, let alone leadership.

This report shows that, in the first five months of this year, 427,638,000 yards of cotton cloths were printed, representing an increase of 28 per cent over the volume for the same period in 1928; and that in these first months of 1929, 763,462,000 yards of cotton were finished—an increase of 130,000,000 yards, or 21 per cent, over the corresponding months of last year.

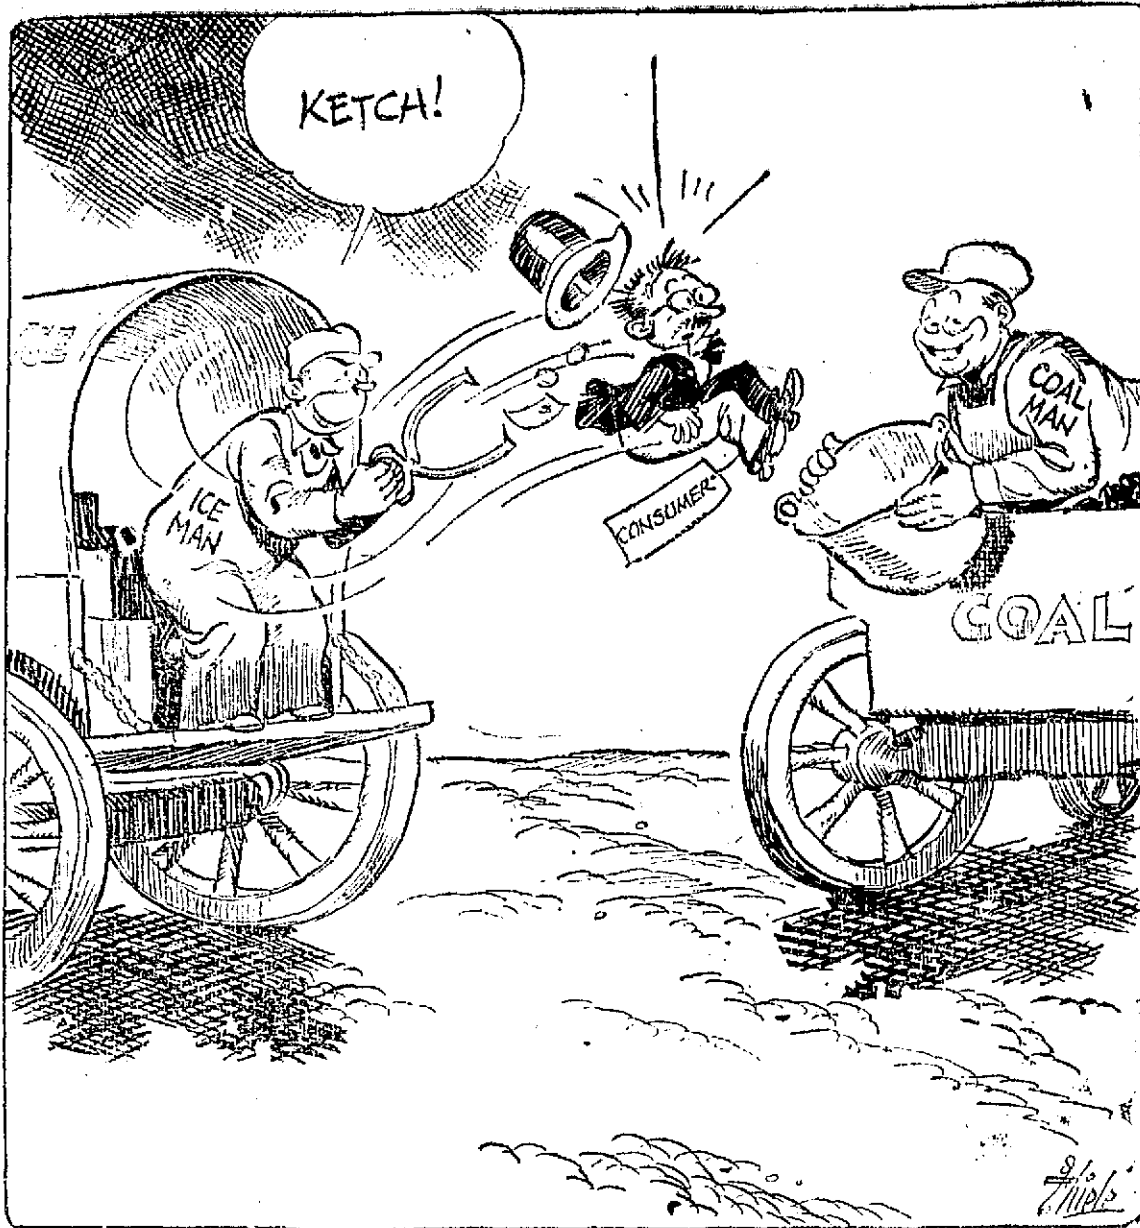

"Three facts," continues Mr. Hines, "are of outstanding importance in the present season, characterized by the new fashion prominence of cotton: Styled cottons have been more widely advertised and more prominently displayed than in any other season. Cottons have achieved a new and prominent position in the field of high style, and their importance has been greatly enhanced in volume style markets. A new and greater consumer interest has been reflected in larger demand for styled cottons."

Bearing out this report are the headlines in advertisements by the leading stores on Fifth Avenue and elsewhere. One reads, "Cotton Frocks Scale the Heights of Fashion." Another declares that "Cottons Are the Fashion." A third points out that "Cotton Brings Color to Court." Others insist that "Fashion Falls in Love with Cotton," "Cotton Is Queen of the Summer Mode," and "Calico Enters the Bedroom."

Evening dresses of cotton were the height of fashion this season, not alone at the exclusive resorts but over the entire country. It is pointed out that velveteen wraps will be worn into the autumn and winter months, and will be most correct.

The climb of cotton from a "pauper" material to the top-most peaks of style is one of the most surprising tales ever recorded, rivaling in sheer fascination the history of the romantic fiber itself. It is one in which Southern people should take the deepest pride and interest—for the story of cotton is a story of the South.—Holland's Magazine.

The First Forward Pass of the Season!

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

WASHINGTON—For more than a year now, Senator Brockhart's committee investigating federal patronage has been digging up the dirt in the purchase and sale of federal offices which everyone knew lay below the surface but which no one had ever exposed before in a large way.

The investigation has been more or less coincident with an announced change of patronage policy on the part of the administration, and the general result has been that Republican bosses in the south are finding poor pickings instead of their customary profitable assessments on federal officeholders who owe them their jobs.

The brookhart committee has actually been into Georgia and Texas and, sitting in Washington, had heard witnesses from South Carolina, Florida, Mississippi and Kentucky.

Investigating a Suicide First off, the committee went into Georgia. The investigation originally was aimed at conditions there. Senators George and Harris, following the suicide of a postmaster who was reported to have been sorely harassed for political contributions, demanded it and Senator George introduced the resolution on which the inquiry was based.

There the committee found four or five men who had set up shop at the Republican party of Georgia, national committee man. Davis was drawing $250 a month. The state treasurer drew the same. The committee seized an assortment of cards which gave the names of postmasters and postmistresses and their periodical payments to the "party." This was the money that went to pay salaries and expenses.

Expenses were incurred when a collector went around and rounded up the delinquents. Also when Ben Davis used to have to go to Washington to see about the federal appointments.

It was charged that as much as $800 had been paid for a single rural letter carrier's job. It was testified, for instance, that John W. Martin, treasurer of the Republican state central committee, had offered a reappointment of one postmistress for contribution, mentioning the sum of $500. The money wasn't paid and there was no reappointment. In Georgia, as in other states, there was testimony that federal jobs were bartered on a basis of returned contributions if the contributor didn't get the job. Sometimes the jobseekers got their money back in such cases and sometimes not.

What Happened in Mississippi Partly through the committee and partly through the Department of Justice, the Perry Howard organization in Mississippi appears to have been thoroughly exposed. Howard had a $6000 job here as special assistant attorney general and maintained offices on Pennsylvania avenue, where he dealt with patronage. One Mr. A. P. Russell testified that when Howard wired him to come to Washington and "bring recommendations" it meant to bring $1500 for a marshalship. Russell did and got the job. Then he resigned because "those negroes down there wanted to sell things around the office and Patton (a close friend of Howard) wanted to lie around the office drunk."

Russell said his successor paid $2000 for his appointment. Howard was indicted last year and prosecuted by Mabel Willebrandt, but was acquitted. The committee heard evidence tending to show that one federal officeholder lost his job because he testified against Howard. The record also shows that Howard deposited $31,000 in banks while in Washington, above his salary.

BARBS

The Colorado banker who got $500,000 from New York banks for the sake of his depositors should be given some kind of rising vote by the newspaper reporters. He is the first one who didn't do it for the wife and kids.

America lacks a sense of humor, says Count Keyserling. He ought to come over here during the football season and read some of the coaches' stories on the eve of big football games.

This is the fourth successive year that California has reported an overproduction of wine grapes. People aren't going in for temperance drinks like wine any more.

A Turk, 143 years old, was killed in an automobile accident the other day. The dispatch didn't say whether or not his parents blamed the driver.

President Hoover says the President men every year without giving any reason or explanation. Come now, Mr. Hoover, you surely don't mean that you wouldn't give us some reason!

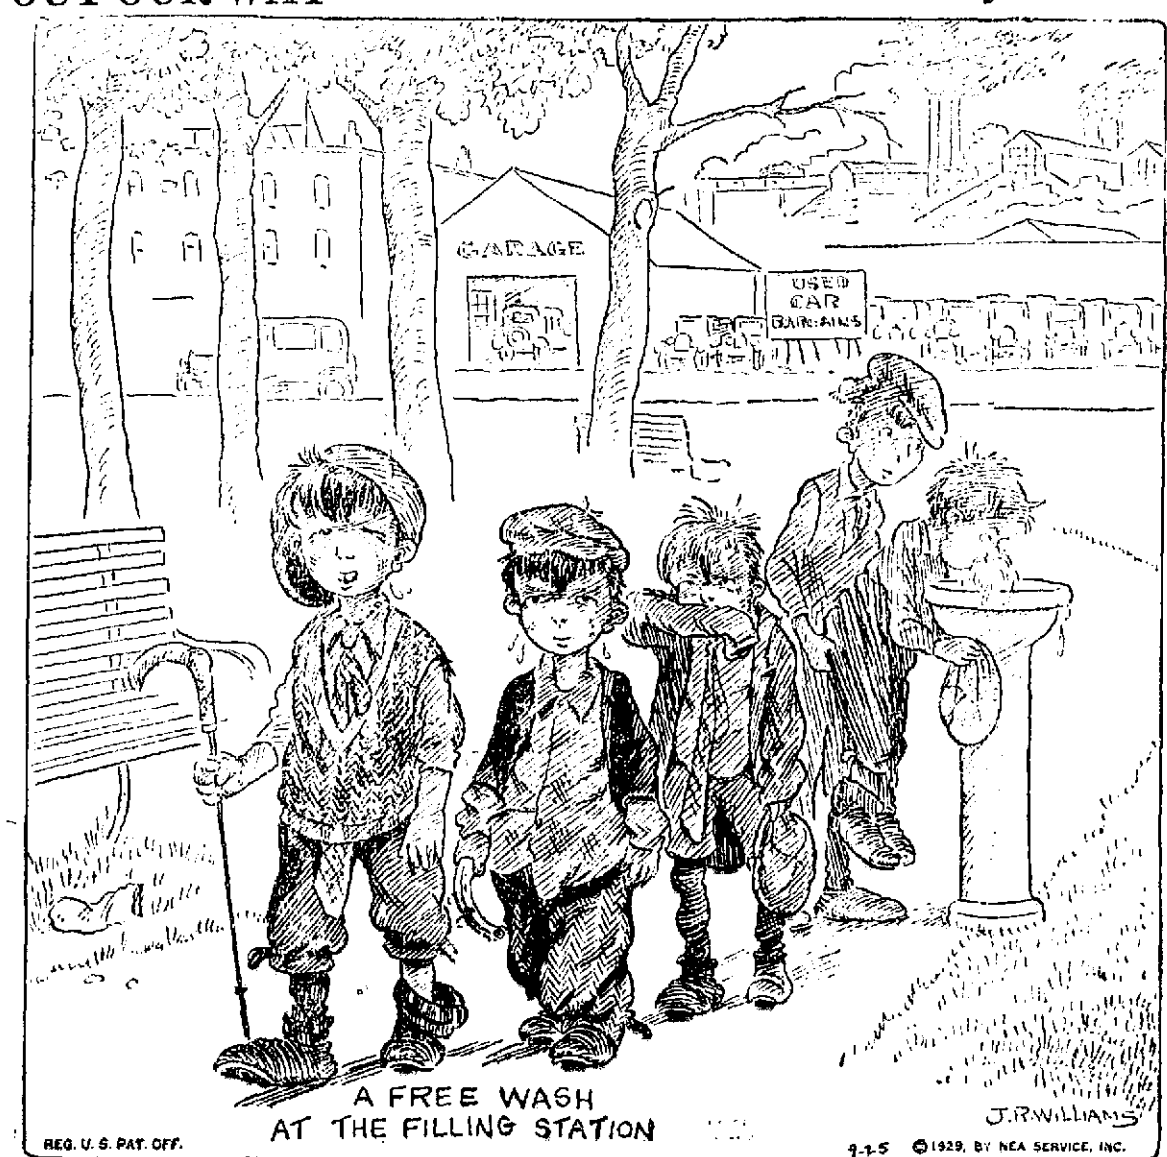

You know a man is successful when the newspapers start quoting him on subjects he knows nothing about.

"He that dwelleth in the secret places of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in Him will I trust."

Surely He shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence. He shall cover thee with His feathers, and under His wings shalt thou trust: His truth shall be thy shield and buckler.

Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day; nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday. Senator Howell's Charge That Washington 'Wet' Gets Quick Action

Then When Blease Explodes the Nation's Seat of Government Is All Excited—President Hoover Takes Hand In Muddled Mex-Up.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Senator Howell of Nebraska didn't intend to criticize President Hoover and the president didn't really grow sensitive over the Nebraska senator's statement about the failure to enforce prohibition in the District of Columbia, but the upshot of it all will be that the attention of the country will be focused on the capital and its drinking habits. And this is exactly what the dries have been trying to accomplish for many years and, incidentally, it is something which the wets have been quietly amused about for an equally long period.

Mr. Hoover need not to have taken in such a great surprise to the wets' statement that Washington ought to be a model city but doing so he boldly took hold of a controversy that will not end overnight. Making Washington dry means officialdom as much as rank and file.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general, recently pointed out that there was no reason why officials who violated the law, whether they are members of congress or not, should not be prosecuted. Again and again charges have been made that bootleggers frequented the capital building but whether for the purpose of supplying lesser employees, who in turn furnish those higher up with the beverages, or whether for the purpose of selling direct to members of congress is something that nobody has had the temerity to investigate.

The district commissioners, who have charge of the police administration of the district of Columbia are directly appointed by the president and can be removed if they are negligent. But the capital is more or less extra-territorial. It has its own police force and it is a serious question whether the district commissioners have any authority at the capital.

What the Nebraska senator was talking about, however, was the condition throughout the city of Washington, where the degree of wetness is perhaps not as pronounced as in the neighboring wet state of Maryland, but the police records show nevertheless a large number of arrests on charges of intoxication, reckless driving due to the use of stimulants and the usual number of shooting affrays which have their origin in the liquor traffic. Broadly speaking Washington is a model city compared to other municipalities, but if there is to be a really bone dry community, this objective is far from accomplishment in the District of Columbia.

The result of the agitation which Senator Howell has provoked and into which the president himself has entered will be to make the enforcement problem concrete so far as official Washington is concerned. Members of the cabinet long ago ceased to serve intoxicants in their homes at social functions and ever since inauguration day the word has been passed around that Mr. Hoover wanted his appointees to obey the spirit as well as the word of the law. Hostesses who wished to make sure that administration officials would attend their dinners and luncheons have had to indicate that no liquor would be served. Washington has in the neighborhood of 800,000

THE New BUICK

New Controlled Servo Enclosed brakes

unrivalled for smooth, sure, silent operation in any weather . . .

To Buick, pioneer of four-wheel brakes, now falls the distinction of another major achievement in this same vital field: the development and introduction of Buick Controlled Servo Enclosed Brakes—the most effective four-wheel braking system ever devised for any automobile!

Buick's new brakes are of the highly efficient internal-expanding type. They are fully enclosed—fully protected against dust, dirt and water—and thus assure maximum braking effectiveness under all weather conditions.

They represent the highest development of the self-energizing principle, which makes the car's own motion provide part of the braking effort.

They reveal unmatched responsiveness to the slightest pedal pressure. And they are so perfectly controlled that "grabbing" is entirely unknown! When you apply these brakes, you obtain the most positive, as well as the smoothest and most silent action you have ever experienced in any automobile!
Drive the new Buick! Test not only its matchless new brakes but its brilliant all-

AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL - POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Helen Page feels unhappy when her classmates accuse her of being in love with her handsome guardian, Leonard Brent. But he represents all that she knows of home and family and she adores him blindly.
Brent changes all his plans for Helen's future after a chance meeting with a dying beggar, Charles Owens Nellin, who tells a strange story which Brent is able to corroborate to some extent by a visit to Yonkers.
On graduating, Helen reminds her guardian of his promise to reveal her parentage and is amazed when he informs her that she is heiress of a millionaire, Cyril K. Cunningham, and that he promised her parents to take her to him when she was 18. They go to Yonkers and Brent introduces her to Cunningham as his granddaughter. He offers as proof the locket containing a picture of Evangeline Cunningham which he had taken from the dying Nellin.
Helen remains at Bramblewood while the lawyer investigates the story. Cunningham presents her with a car which she drives everywhere. One day she accidentally strikes a girl, Eva Ennis, who has been taken to the hospital. Eva's brother, Robert, upbraids Helen for her selfish recklessness and then, noting her unstrung condition, offers to drive her home. Cunningham receives him graciously and invites him to spend the evening. The young couple go for a canoe ride.
Next day Brent arrives and when he hears about her meeting with Robert asks her to go to New York for dinner and the theatre. Coming home that night he kisses Helen for the first time and tells her that he loves her.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XX
Helen was superintending the serving of her grandfather's dinner in his room when he spoke to her about his plans for her birthday celebration.
"I'd like you to have a party, my dear," he said to her suddenly when she unfolded his napkin and laid it across his lap.
Helen's surprise was her only answer.
"Oh," Helen exclaimed, "I . . ."
she stopped. An expression of disappointment was coming over the aged man's features. It touched her. After all, she reflected quickly, she could go out with Leonard another time. And he could come to the party.
"I've never had a real birthday party," she said enthusiastically. "I should love it."
If Mr. Cunningham detected a trace of regret in her voice he did not reveal it.
"I wonder," he said, "if you would like to have it as I would." Helen waited inquiringly.
"A party of yesterday," he said softly. "But of course you don't know what that would be like."
"Tell me about one of mother's parties," Helen said impulsively.
Mr. Cunningham patted the hand she reached out to him. "I'd rather recreate one of them for you," he replied, "on your birthday."
He went on then to tell her of his plans. It was his wish, he said, to recall the spirit of his daughter's youth—to see young people about him in the costume of older days.
"But I'm sure they would spoil it for you with their dancing," Helen interjected. "Jazz wouldn't go with a minuet setting."
"Must they have jazz?"
"I'm afraid they don't know how to dance to other music, except waltzes."
"Well," Mr. Cunningham sighed, "we will make it fifty-fifty, as you youngsters say. A waltz for a . . . what are they called?"
Helen laughed. "Oh, anything," she said; "Racoon, Mess Around, Lowdown, Drag . . . anything."
Mr. Cunningham smiled. "You will have to ask some of your school friends," he suggested, "though I notice you are beginning to be popular with our local society."
"That's a dandy crowd at the Selwyns'," Helen declared. "I met them on the lake. Then Mrs. Selwyn called—but you know that. They've been lovely to me."
"Perhaps you can get Joyce Selwyn to help you with your invitations," her grandfather remarked. "It's probably the only way I can . . ."

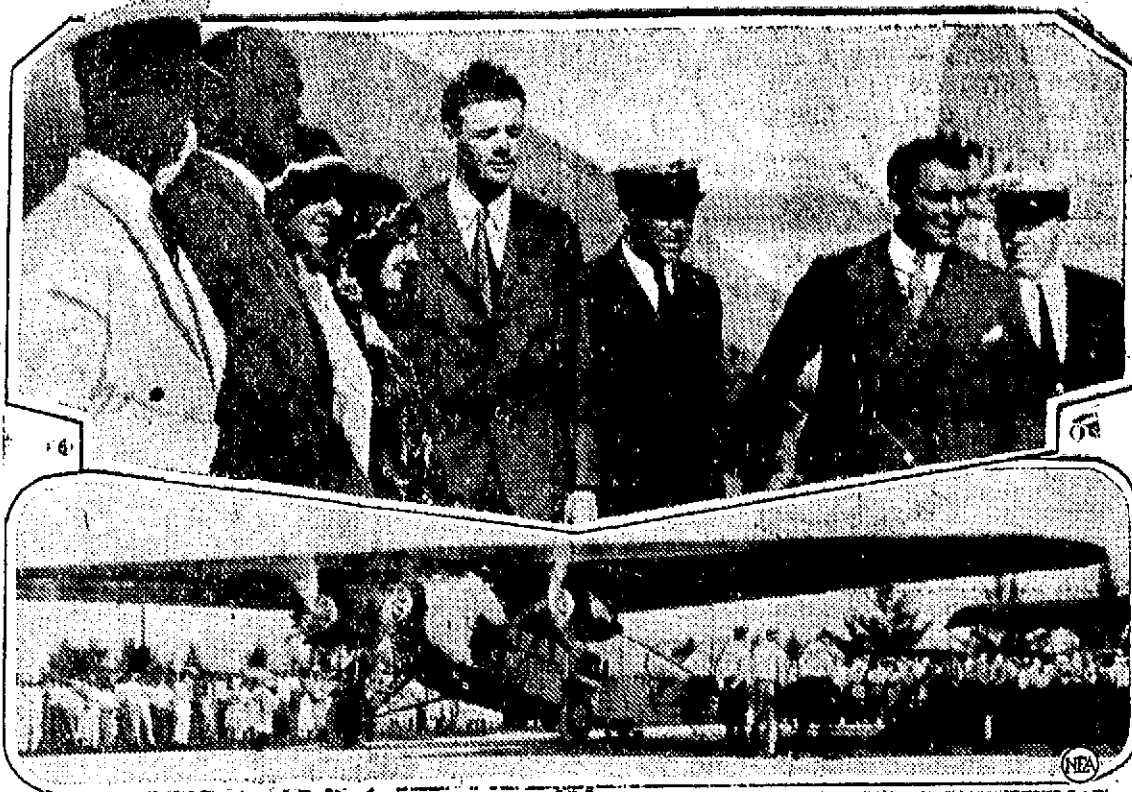

A few minutes later, in a secluded corner of the library, he tore the locket from his pocket and opened it.

get enough people for a party," in it to the parents she could not remember.
Helen admitted.
Mr. Cunningham looked at her with grave concern. "Your position here is a . . . a bit trying, my dear, isn't it?"
Helen glanced away. She did not like to tell him that she had found it necessary to evade certain politely veiled inquiries put to her by Mrs. Selwyn and a few other socially important people whom she had met.
"We'll remedy that—in time," Mr. Cunningham said hastily. "Don't be discouraged, dear. Mr. Greaves' reports are favorable to you." He smiled to himself, thinking of the surprise he was planning for her.
His words pleased Helen. She

There was much that she was grateful for. Many things to be fondled and wept over. And at last she came upon a photograph of Charles Nellin—the man she believed to be her father.
She studied his handsome features intently and reverently and wondered why there was a slight chill at her heart. The picture of her mother, in the locket, she loved. There was a sad fatality in it that touched a responsive cord in her own heart, but Charles Nellin's countenance lacked the power to move her.
Still, she took his photograph to her room and placed it on her

As the days passed and the preparations for her birthday party went smoothly ahead she paused often to look at that pictured face and wonder if her mother had been happily married.

A happy marriage, Helen was beginning to believe, might conceivably be a very rare thing. For, old-fashioned as she was in certain matters, she was modern enough in others. In regard to Brent, for instance, she was frank with herself. She knew she would marry him if he asked her to, but she knew also that their life would be shadowed by his past.

She tried, struggling with her fledgling philosophy of life, to tell herself that she was not jealous of him. "It's only that my ideals are toppled a bit," she put it.

She thought she preferred a pristine love, unguessed of the passion that accepts the past as dead, and forgets it where that is the only way to happiness.

This thought was in her mind on the night of her party when she witnessed Brent's triumph with the other girls. Helen smiled over it, but a hint of worry crept into her eyes as she saw him lift Eva Ennis' lovely hands to his lips.

Had she known with what detachment the act was committed she might have been at peace. But had she known that it was a duty kiss—one that Eva would accept—she might well have been disturbed.

The girls had not exchanged confidences. Brent's training of Helen had cultivated a natural reticence almost to the point of making secrecy a habit with her.

And Eva was too shy to talk. Brent was too wise. Eva did not know that Helen was more than a ward to him and Helen did not know that Brent was amusing himself with Eva.

On the occasions when the two met at Bramblewood it seemed quite natural to Helen that they should sometimes be alone together. Brent had been surprised to find that Eva interested him at a second meeting.

He had flirted a trifle and then tried to drop it, but Eva's simplicity interested him. Had he been a bit wiser than he was he would have known that it was the simplicity of genius—of greatness, that needed no camouflage of complexity to express itself.

But tonight, as he kissed her hand, he was not thinking of Eva. As quickly as he could he felt her, to seek seclusion and examine an object that seemed fairly to be burning a hole in his pocket.

It was a locket. Identical with the one he had taken from Charles Nellin's possession.
He had found it on the floor of the main building. Just inside the door. As he picked it up he thought that Helen had dropped it there. He had put it in his pocket with the intention of returning it and cautioning her against such carelessness.

Before he could locate her he had seen Eva. And just as she came up to him, smiling a welcome, Helen had appeared behind her. Brent's quick eye saw in a glance that Helen was wearing her locket.

For an instant his mind was in a whirl. Then he bent over Eva's hand and bestowed the customary kiss upon it. When he looked up Helen was turning away.

A few minutes later, in a secluded corner of the library, he took the locket from his pocket and opened it. It must be, he knew, the locket that Mr. Cunningham had spoken of—the one he believed his daughter Evangeline had taken away with her.

He had expected to see Cyril Cunningham's picture in it. An exclamation of surprise escaped him when he saw that it contained one of Charles Nellin instead.

Whom could it belong to? Where had it come from? He must, he

Divorce from Common-Law Marriage Asked In Illinois

AURORA, Ill., Sept. 25.—Common law marriage as it relates to divorce laws is to be tested in the Kane County circuit court here.

Stating that she lived with Charles S. Marsolf, 54, as his common law wife for six years, Mrs. Gertrude Girardet Marsolf, 60, has filed suit to be freed from such relationship if there is any legal way of doing so. Mrs. Marsolf says that she met the defendant in 1920, and that he told her he was a former minister and a lawyer.

At that time, she asserts that he informed her that he did not get along with his wife and as he would soon be divorced, he would then marry her. Shortly after he went to Miles City, Mont., to preach in a church there, she says.

When he came back in 1923, the bill relates, Marsolf asserted he had obtained a divorce and asked her to marry him in Chicago.

After reaching that city, she said, he confessed that he had not obtained the decree but expected it shortly and that it would be all right for her to live with him as his common law wife, inasmuch as divorce proceedings had been commenced.

Mrs. Marsolf said she was ignorant of such matters but consented to his suggestion, expecting him to marry her as soon as the divorce was obtained.

Marsolf, she said, took charge told himself, find out at once if Helen had discovered it here at Bramblewood or if . . .

The thought that someone here, among the guests, might be the owner of the locket brought a cold perspiration to Brent's usually cool brow.

BILIOUS, SICK, COULD NOT EAT

Lady Says She Has Avoided Suffering by Taking Theford's Black-Draught.

Salem, S. C.—For many years, Theford's Black-Draught has been highly esteemed in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cantrell, of this place. Mrs. Cantrell says:

"My children are grown and married, but all during their childhood at home, I used Black-Draught with them when they had colds or little stomach troubles, and when not sick enough for stronger medicine."

"I found it a great help, and never was without it. My husband and I still use it."

"I used to suffer quite a bit from headaches, especially in the spring. If I got bilious, my head would ache and I would be very nauseated, not able to eat anything, and just too sick to go. We used to call them 'blinding headaches,' for my eyes ached, too."

"Black-Draught certainly was fine for this. If I would begin taking Black-Draught when I felt a headache coming on, I would not have a bad one. When I found this was the case, I avoided lots of pain. It is the best medicine of the kind I have ever found."

HE DROVE A FRIEND'S CAR... then changed his buying habits..

"HE WAS one of those who believed that all motor fuels and oils are about alike and that it did not make much difference where he bought his gasoline and oil.

"He would stop at any station along the road. Said the gas and oil were just as good and didn't cost him as much. He used to laugh at his friend for being so particular. Said his friend was foolish to use only "Standard" Products in his car. Couldn't understand why he did it.

"One day, when his own car was in the shop for repairs to the motor, he had occasion to borrow his friend's car—which happened to be the same make and model as his own, was purchased about the same time, and had covered about the same mileage. The performance of his friend's car, as compared with his own, awakened him to the fact that it does make a big difference where you buy your gasoline and motor oil. And he has been sticking to "Standard" ever since."

Whitney Colors
Jimmy Rowe, the veteran trainer of the horses of Harry Payne Whitney, died, but his soul goes marching on. When old Jimmy died, there was some speculation as to who would succeed him. That was settled by Harry Payne Whitney by the appointment of his son, whose name also is Jimmy.

Many years young Jimmy Reddick Hopkins served their apprenticeship under old Jimmy. Old Jimmy was good, not only a trainer of horses but as a manager of the men who handle them. He was more than a great trainer, he was a fine character. There is no doubt he handled the best conditioned and most truly great American turf. Before the death of Harry Payne Whitney, old Jimmy also superintended the training of the Greentree horses.

Jimmy Looks On
The tradition of Whitney sports-ship dates back for generations and it will continue. Of late years Jimmy Whitney has not been a regular visitor to the races as formerly, but the great showing by his year-olds, Boojum and Whichone, has fired his interest. He has been going to the tracks regularly since the death of old Jimmy.

There was a great bond between the trainer and millionaire owner. Jimmy's word was law around the stables. He was the highest authority. His employer never intervened—and the record of the Whitney horses shows why he did not. Perhaps he has returned to the races to watch more closely the results young Jimmy gets with the pair of great two-year-olds now in his care. On that score, it appears, H. P. need have no apprehension, for young Jimmy has learned his lessons well.

Like Father and Uncle
As young Jimmy Rowe is carrying on the Rowe tradition in fine fashion, so is young Jack Whitney, son of the late Harry Payne Whitney, following in his father's footsteps both in sport and finance. He is rapidly developing into one of the country's best young polo players. With his mother, Mr. Helen Hay Whitney, he is running the Greentree stable, which includes a breeding as well as a racing establishment.

His uncle, Harry Payne Whitney, was a great polo player in his day, one of the greatest. For years H. P. Whitney carried upon his own shoulders the burden of financing international polo until it stood upon sound footing.

A Run for the Money
The brown and blue of the H. P. Whitney stable is well known on all the tracks in Kentucky, Maryland, Illinois, Canada and the east. During the fall his two great colts, Boojum and Whichone, will compete for the rich Kentucky prizes and

Tunney Answers Damage Action

Ex-Champion's Counter Claims Asks $100,000 Damages.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 25.—(AP)—In a 13-word answer James J. (Gene) Tunney denies the truth of charges made by John S. Fogarty, of Fort Worth, Tex., in a $500,000 allegation of affections suit.

Coupled with his denial the former heavyweight boxing champion filed a counter-claim for $100,000 damages charging blackmail. Tunney's answer to the Fogarty suit read:

"The defendant denies the truth of the matter contained in the plaintiff's complaint."

Fogarty, in his complaint filed in July, charged that Tunney met Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty at Hot Springs, Ark., in 1924 and carried on an affair with her at Lakewood, N. J., St. Paul, Chicago and New York. Mrs. Fogarty also has a $500,000 damage suit on file against Tunney, charging breach of promise to marry.

In his counter-claim, Tunney charged that since October, 1924, Fogarty and his wife have conspired together and with other persons to defraud him "by threats of injury to his reputation, and by defamations of his character; to blackmail him and to cause him to suffer mental anguish, public contumely and notoriety."

In furtherance of his alleged conspiracy, he charged Fogarty and his wife made false claims that he had agreed to marry her and had improper relations with her. He claims the $100,000 damages for injury to his reputation and loss of property rights and moneys.

A reply to Tunney's counter-claim must be filed by counsel for Fogarty before the case can go to trial. As yet no reply has been made to Tunney's answer to the breach of promise suit brought by Mrs. Fogarty last May.

Tunney and his bride, the former Polly Lauder, of Greenwich, Conn., still are in Italy where they went on their honeymoon.

In the Pimlico Futurity. Besides he has in Dustmell and Murky Cloud two of the neatest-looking young fillies of the year.

Backed by the Whitney tradition of good sportsmanship, these four thoroughbreds will be popular choices in some of the great fall races. And their backers are sure of a run for their money.

Here's First Mexican Grid Team

American football has captured Mexico—yes, even Portes Gil, president of Mexico, has fallen for it. After watching scrumming between two picked teams of players at the University of Mexico, where football is being introduced this year, he expressed strong approval of the game and even posed with the players when a cameraman took their picture. The arrow indicates Gil. The Mexican team is scheduled to play Louisiana College this fall.

Joe McCarthy Hopes To Calm Star Hurler's Fiery Temper

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—A man never loses his temper is endeavoring to teach that rare art of human conduct to one of the most temperamental pitching stars of baseball. If he succeeds he believes his team will be the new world's champions.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Cubs is the teacher. His pupil is Pat Malone, a fiery, husky Irishman who is invincible when calm and ineffective when angry.

There is no secret about McCarthy's world series plans for Malone. He wants him in the box for the first game and for another if he comes through. Seemingly it all depends on Pat.

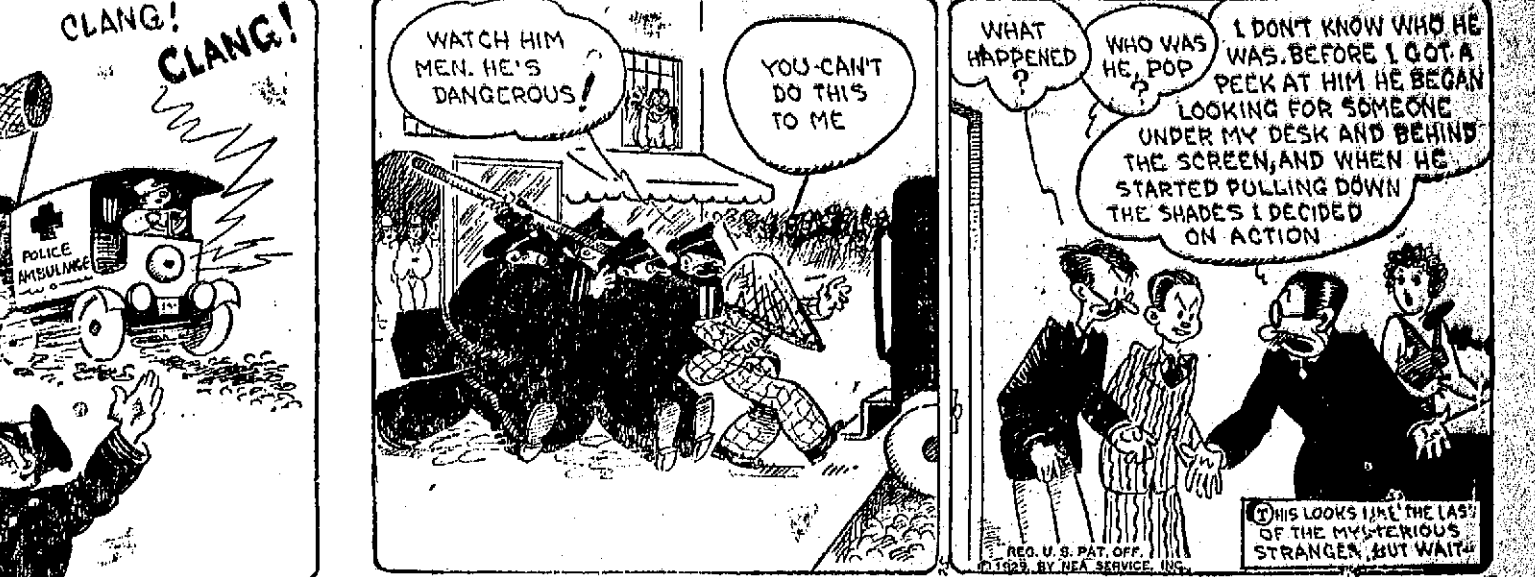

Temperament has been Malone's most destructive ailment since he came into baseball. Years ago he failed in a tryout with the Giants and then slumped badly to start off with the Cubs at the start of the 1928 season until he managed to forget about umpires' decisions and fans' razzing. This season, however, he has been successful, winning 22 games and losing nine.

With him is his brother, Ronald, who attended the Boy Scout jamboree in England this summer.

Gold Medal Shows Just Big Family

Harry Billick, the Boss, Is In Close Touch With Personnel.

The life of a trouper is usually supposed to be a hard one—and it usually is. To this rule there are few exceptions, but the Gold Medal Shows prove the rule is not inviolate. For the aggregation under Harry Billick's control comes nearer being one big family than anything else. As witness any evening Mr. Billick listening in on any one of a thousand minor matters, always ready to smooth things out.

He has managed to surround himself with a number of artists in many lines. His athletic show, different from the ordinary carnival attraction, carries a selection of men worth while. Last night one of them mixed with Johnny Celmar and shaded the local boy. You don't need any other evidence to know that he's fast and tough.

In the minstrel show, Billick stepped out and picked up some real talent. George Shafer, of Shafer and Shafer, known from coast to coast to vaudeville and vaudeville and radio fans, and radio fans, and Sadie James and Lillian Curtis, blues singer extraordinary, not to mention "Ginger" Fisher, side-kick in other days of the famous "Stringbean" Evans. Then there's Buck Williams who shakes a wicked hoof and sings—boy, howdy! But that bird can sing!

But you don't get close to Billick unless you know horses. His saddle horse, "Sundown," he has had for 16 years. Many of his draft horses have been with him nearly that long, some of them wearers of blue ribbons won in horse shows in the east. They are Billick's first and last thought and were he unto the roughneck who mistreats one of them. Just talk horses to him—you'll meet him at the races at Fair Park each afternoon—and if you know what you are talking about you've found an interesting companion.

Tonight Mr. Billick is host to Star newbies and as his guests the youngsters will see the sights on the midway, take on popcorn, pink lemonade in everything.

School Teachers Endorse the New Discovery

Many Children Sent to School When They Should Be at Home In Bed.

Parents, you do wrong to blame the school teachers when your children do not do well at school. It is probably your own fault. The child is not well and naturally the mind will not function. Look out for that coated tongue; headache; that pale yellow color. Your child has a touch of malaria and will not do well until this poison is removed from the system. NASH'S CHILL & LIVER TONIC, the new discovery, is absolutely harmless, non-poisonous, and pleasant to take. It will put your child in tip-top shape with a few doses. The enormous demand puts the price down to 50c per bottle.

PERSONAL MENTION

The many friends of Mrs. W. D. Patterson, formerly Miss Goldie Richards, will be pleased to learn that her condition is reported as much improved.

One vidence that the saloon will never return is that they could never get back the best corner from the filling stations and the chain drug stores.

President Gil wants to substitute football for bullfighting in Mexico. Of course it's none of our business; but does he know what a rough game football is?

chopped down for him to get off the ground at all at Paron and that he did not dare try taking his passengers up with him.

Town of Nellie's Apron Gets New Name

CONWAY, Ark., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The town of Nellie's Apron henceforth will be called Napron.

Railroad men are responsible for the change in name, and hereafter, freight shipments destined to what once was Nellie's Apron must be plainly addressed to Napron unless the shipper has little regard for its safe arrival, not to speak of the feelings of the residents.

Napron or Nellie's Apron, cannot easily be found on the map, but nevertheless, it rests midway between Cotter and Yellville, on the White river division of the Missouri Pacific railroad.

Rail road men point out the change in name will still leave a suggestion of the former name, and what sentiment is attached to the old name will not suffer because Napron will cause Nellie to be remembered and her apron can not be forgotten.

The Chamber of Commerce is now advertise them as cool in summer, warm in winter and ideal in both spring and fall.

You can't reason with life. We shape it by the way we are today living it and that's how history is made.

"Of course," said Ben Bender, the village wag, "them counterfeitters that was caught the other day might plead that, like a lotta other folks, they was only tryin' to make money."

Royalty Inspect American Plane

Ford air transport on exhibit at International Aero Show in London, where it served to direct attention to American Aviation

The Prince of Wales, who is taking a keen interest in aviation

"VERY much indeed," replied the Prince of Wales, when asked if he would like a ride in the first tri-motored Ford air transport exhibited in Europe. The plane is pictured above as it was displayed at the International Aero Show at London, where its design and all metal construction attracted much interest.

An opportunity to demonstrate the plane to the Prince will be sought when it is returned to London.

The Prince sat in the cabin and remarked on the comfort of the seating. Other royal visitors inspected the Ford plane, among them being the King of Spain, the Duke of York and the Duke of Connaught. The plane is now on a 20,000 mile tour of important cities of Europe. It was the second American airplane seen in Moscow, and the first large transport ship. Interest there was so great that 200 officials of the Russian Government, leading aviators, aeronautical engineers were taken for rides.

In introducing its all-metal airplane to Europe the Ford Motor Company is demonstrating the model being used in this country by several of the leading operators of air passenger lines, and by a number of business organizations that have adopted the airplane for the quick transportation of officials or the express of their products.
